IE Discovery Continues Socha-Gelbmann Winning Streak
Provider Near Top of Rankings in Leading Electronic Discovery Survey for Third Straight Year

Austin, Texas (July 22, 2008)— IE Discovery, a leading provider of comprehensive Discovery Management solutions to the legal community, has again been ranked as a top Overall Provider of electronic discovery services by the prestigious 2008 Socha-Gelbmann Electronic Discovery Survey. The company also scored a Top 5 ranking in Experience and Top 5 or Top 10 in seven different stages of electronic discovery: Identification, Preservation, Collection, Review, Analysis, Production and Presentation.

“We are delighted that the industry has acknowledged us as a leading provider for the third straight year,” said Chris May, CEO of IE Discovery. “It is especially gratifying to be cited in Experience, since we have been working hard to deliver reliable, innovative work to our clients for almost two decades.” IE Discovery has been providing Discovery Management services to government agencies and companies since 1990.

IE Discovery was rated highly both as an Overall Provider and in seven different stages of electronic discovery, which reflects the company’s philosophy of providing comprehensive services that encompass the entire discovery cycle. “A comprehensive Discovery Management plan is necessary for any organization frequently involved in litigation,” said Bill Detamore, IE Discovery’s Chief Legal Officer. “Hiring a comprehensive Discovery Management provider is an easy and effective way to deal with discovery for many organizations that don’t have the resources or expertise to address it themselves.”

The 6th Annual Socha-Gelbmann Electronic Discovery Survey is a highly respected and comprehensive report on the electronic discovery industry. Conducted by independent consultants George Socha and Tom Gelbmann, the survey examines the industry by gathering information from 155 organizations that provide or consume electronic discovery services.
